

Preliminary Inventory
Lectures and Addresses [19th Century] Collection
Collection Number: 1000-273

Date: 1838-1856, 1970

Number of containers: 1 open file

Brief description of collection:

The Lectures and Addresses [19th Century] Collection contains copies of the lectures and addresses delivered at Wesleyan University during the 19th century.

This collection consists of bound pamphlets of the speeches and several attempts from various time periods to construct a comprehensive listing of lectures and where they might be found throughout various library collections.

Lectures:

- Technology, Environment, Morality, and Ethics in the World of Today and Tomorrow by Philip Sporn, 1970, Honors College
- Literary Character of the Scriptures by Alexander Everett, 1838, Philorhetorian and Peithologian Societies
- The Intellectual and Moral Powers of Education by Rev. Prof. John Newland Maffit, 1841, Wesleyan University Literary Societies
- Untitled Address by the Hon. E. Jackson Jr., 1835, The Peithologian Society
- The Nature and Uses of Eloquence by Rev. John Dempster, 1835, the Philorhetorian Society
- An Address On Natural Science by Professor William H. Allen, 1838, the Cuvierian Society
- The Duty of the American Scholar to Politics and the Times by George William Curtis, 1856, Wesleyan University Literary Societies
- Duty by Robert Emory, 1843, Wesleyan University Literary Societies
- Varieties of Mankind by Thomas Bond, 1843, Cuvierian and Physiological Societies
- The Character of Wilberforce by Dr. William Sprague, 1848, Wesleyan University Literary Societies

Sonya Sternlieb, Nov. 18, 2016