

DAVID KOHAN

David Kohan is the co-creator/executive producer of the 18-time Emmy Award-winning comedy series “Will & Grace,” which ended its 11-season run on NBC in April 2020.

In addition to “Will & Grace,” Kohan has created and served as executive producer on numerous television series over the past 25 years with writing partner Max Mutchnick. Previous projects include “Clipped,” “Partners,” “$#! My Dad Says,” “Four Kings,” “Twins,” “Good Morning, Miami,” “Boston Common,” “Dream On,” “The Single Guy,” “The Wonder Years,” “Evening Shade,” “Designing Women” and “The Dennis Miller Show.”

In September 2016, Kohan and Mutchnick produced and released a surprise reunion of “Will & Grace” online, which was helmed by legendary director James Burrows, who was an executive producer on the original series. The success of which was the impetus for bringing the show back to NBC in 2017 for three seasons.

Kohan is a proud alumnus of Wesleyan University, where he majored in English and philosophy.

Kohan is also co-creator and producer of daughters Olivia and Nora. He currently lives in Los Angeles with Nora and his wife, Blair, a board member and motion picture agent at UTA.
