Course Description:

In this course we will explore Jane Austen’s unique approach to the realist novel and her distinctive engagement in contemporaneous debates about art, personhood, and politics. Austen was a sharp, subtle, and principled writer who tended to explore competing arguments and assumptions rather than render explicit judgments. She weighed in on aesthetic controversies involving beauty and the picturesque, the appropriate language for literature, the ethics of readers’ identification with characters, and the truth claims inherent in realism. She considered philosophical questions about how individuals come to know the world and themselves, and the value and danger of a complex inner life of emotion and imagination. She examined the competing claims her contemporaries made for the primacy of the individual, the family, and the community, and for local rootedness and cosmopolitan independence. Our course reading will consist of three novels by Austen as well as works of painting, literature, and nonfiction prose.

Course Requirements:

- three reading and reflection exercises (10% each)
- three 4-5 p. papers (20% each)
- class participation (10%)

Policies:

- Please arrive two minutes early to each zoom meeting so we can begin on time. Repeated tardiness will lower your grade.
- Please keep your camera on during class unless you experience technical difficulties.
- Please do not do anything else during class except be present, and please be present with your whole self—listening as well as speaking, thinking and learning, discovering and sharing in the collective work of our conversations. Please be mindful of communicating your attention and commitment to discussion to me and your fellow students. This is how I understand good participation—not as speaking a lot, but as being present in these ways.
- Students may miss one session for any reason without penalty. Additional absences will lower your grade. If you miss three sessions, I will ask you to withdraw from the course.
You may revise any assignment at any point until June 21, when everything is due. The highest grade will be counted.

*Please save copies of your graded papers with my comments on them. Should you ever ask me to write a letter of recommendation for you, I will need to see them.

If in your written work you consult or employ any materials that do not appear on the syllabus, you must cite them; even if you do not use them directly, you should append a “Works Consulted” page. If you have any questions about plagiarism, please see me and/or consult the discussion in the student handbook at www.wesleyan.edu/studenthandbook/plagiarism.html.

If you require accommodations in this class, please speak with me as soon as possible, so that appropriate arrangements can be made. The procedures for registering with Disabilities Services can be found at www.wesleyan.edu/deans/disability-students.html.
